Bernie,

I am still trying to gather all the information. However, unless I discover otherwise (unlikely), the formula our School uses is 2.5 full courses per academic year. This includes graduate teaching, but nothing else (i.e. no credit for reading courses, supervising theses, special research activities-- unless specifically negotiated with the dean, advising, etc.). I surely hope things will change and that all those academic activities not presently included will become part of the formula.

Best regards,

Dear Sarah,

I thought I had already replied to your request. Anyway, I need to know what are you actually asking for. The workload policy in the School? Quite simple: 2.5 FCEs, except for the CLAs, who must put in 3.0 FCEs. We are not allowed to count in class size, course level, nature of the course, mode of delivery, advising, graduate supervision, supervision of tutors etc, and directed reading courses
